Errors of the Amanuensis or The Calumny of the Secretary was inspired by the invitation to work at the Haus für Industriekultur (House of Industrial Culture) in Darmstadt, Germany. When we heard that the Museum had at least 3,000 type fonts, we knew that at last, we could print this book, exploring the relationship between binary code and letterpress printing.

Many thanks to Barbara Beisinghoff for arranging the residency and to Wolfgang Blauert, the Director of the Haus für Industrie-Kultur, and his crew of printers and type-setters. We are also grateful to Liane Palesch and Erwin Koch for being such gracious hosts to us at the Künstlerhaus Ziegelhütte.

Ann and Tana were completely boggled by the bad notes
the wandering secretary took of the Master's speech.
Was he a failed stenographer, or was he:

1. just making fun;
2. trying to undermine the ideas of the teacher, who kept going on and on, repeating himself;
3. confused by the multiple meanings;
4. or so unsure of himself that he didn't understand the silly speech?

Nevertheless, he should be fired or at least spanked.
